Says Report On Aluminum Company
Is Unfair And Incorrect.

Washington — Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon regarded as unfair and incorrect in many respects the statements concerning the

U.S. FARM BANK AID SUCCESSFUL

Aluminum Company of America continued in the federal trade commission's report of its investigation into the house furnishings industry. The report made public charged the Aluminum company, in which Mr. Mellon is interested, with having monopolistic tendencies and with employing certain unfair practices in trade.

While the secretary said he was interested as a stockholder, he told associates that he was unfamiliar with details of the company's affairs, the entire management being left to its officers. He was understood to have tory that it has broadened its activities to include aid in farm diversification.

resented statements in the report to the effect that big dividends had been paid by the corporation. With the dividend payments, Mr. Mellon said he was familiar.

The defendant, in his cell, protests his sanity to all who will listen, and he discusses the case calmly and with apparent unconcern.

SEEK TO DISFRANCHISE NEGRO

Citizenship of Race Attacked in Suit On Customs Collector.

New Orleans. A suit attacking the citizenship of the race was filed today in the federal court here by the United States against a customs collector.

Figure 1 is a line graph showing the time course of the effect of 100 mg/kg of diazepam on the plasma concentration of diazepam in rats. The y-axis is labeled 'Plasma concentration (mg/L)' and ranges from 0 to 1.0. The x-axis is labeled 'Time (h)' and ranges from 0 to 12. There are two data series: one represented by open circles (○) and another by open squares (□). Both series show a peak around 2-4 hours and then a decline. The open circles series is consistently higher than the open squares series. Error bars are present for each data point.

NEW ORLEANS.—A suit attacking the validity of the fourteenth amendment, from a new angle has been filed in federal district court here in the form of a petition seeking to enjoin Walker L. Cohen, Negro, collector of customs of the port of New Orleans, from exercising the duties of that office, according to the Times-Picayune. The action, if successful, would have the effect of disenfranchising every Negro in the United States.

The petition, as published by the newspaper, charges that Cohen "falsely alleged himself to be a citizen the United States" when he took the oath to office. It asserts that the defendant is not a citizen of this country, but is "a person of African blood and descent and is inherently incapable of being a citizen of the United States."

PRINCE CHARMING

SYNOPSIS: Ellen and Jos. Latimer, orphan, without means, make their home with their Aunt Elsie, at Fort Washington, small New York town. Ellen is studying art; her expenses being paid by Mrs. Sewall Rose, girlhood friend of her mother. Mrs. Rose invites Ellen to a Thanksgiving house party and the girl is delighted. On the way from the station to Mrs. Rose's Ellen rides with a remarkably attractive young woman and a much older man. She takes them for father and daughter, but they are introduced as Mr. and Mrs. Josselyn. Ellen does not "fit in" with the younger members of the party. The next morning, Ellen meets her home next morning, Ellen meets Gibbs Josselyn, the original of the photograph.

Ellen would have recognized him instantly from the picture. His head, back in the sunshine, was silver, and the lean, clever face he remembered was clear olive in coloring, and brightened now with a most winning and kindly smile. Ellen's first rather awkward impression was of noise, reserve, self-confidence. Authority spoke in the pleasant voice, and every inch of the man was stamped to her young vision with a business, an aristocracy, a something that marked him superior to others.

In the midst of the first jumble of explanations from the newcomers, as to their reasons for leaving Great Harrington, and their first details of the trip, Mrs. Rose disinterestedly interrupted.

"Gibbs—Gibbs my dear boy," stammered she, holding his hand in both her far ones, and fixing upon him a look at once imploring and conciliatory. "You know your father is here, dear—I wouldn't have had it happen for anything in the whole world—but he and Lillian got in on Wednesday, and she telephoned me at once to come down and lunch with them—I really do feel

Gibbs Josselyn had flushed up to the silver crest, but he smiled upon her not unkindly.

"Is he here?"

"Yes, Gibbs—and Lillian."

"What does he do?" asked Ellen. "What does he do?" asked Ellen. "What does he do?" asked Ellen.

Young Josselyn put Ellen into the car, and tucked the heavy robe snugly about her. In another ten seconds he had sprung into his own seat, and waved a good-bye to the watching roses. The rousing of the car drowned out all farewell.

"A day or two ago Ellen might have felt it her place to keep the conversation moving. But the last forty-eight hours had been full of painful lessons for her; she knew better now than to attempt any friendly overtures. Boys summer than she had snubbed her girls of seventeen had looked upon her askance. So she kept absolutely silent, her bright eyes moving between the fur of her hat and the fur of her collar like those of a timid but interested bird.

As the car was brought neatly against the station platform she began to free herself from her wrappings, and said politely:

"I'm a thousand times obliged to you, Mr. Josselyn."

"I don't know whether you are or not," he said, parrying his eyes at her quickly. "I think we've missed it."

"Missed it! Oh, goodness!" Ellen echoed in dismay.

"Stay where you are," he said, jumping from his seat. "I'll find out."

He crossed the station platform and disappeared, and Ellen sat in a pine, waiting for him. Oh, she couldn't go back to that house, and have the whole thing begin over again!

"Yes, indeed, we've missed it," said Gibbs Josselyn, coming back, and leaning against the car with sympathetic eyes on her face. "Was it pretty important, or what? The next is at one twenty-two."

"It's not so important," Ellen said, in a troubled voice. "But I don't like to go back—I'll wait here!"

"What—until after one o'clock?"

"Yes, I think so," Ellen answered firmly. "I don't know them very well."

"And I think I rather worry Mrs. Rose, not getting on exactly with the others."

She stopped, conscious that this explanation was rather lame, and added finally: "You see, they all know each other so well, and they don't know me."

"I see perfectly," Gibbs said sympathetically. "You would be safer in a band of Hottentots."

Ellen laughed. Her white night had only added a touch of mystery, of spirituality, to her Irish beauty; after all, and the drive, after her breakfast, had brought back her wild-rose color. The man looked at her as if he saw her for the first time, looked down at his big fur glove, plucked his hand suddenly into it, and asked carelessly:

"You couldn't make the run with me, I suppose? I'm going straight down to my club. It would take us more than a couple of hours."

"The girls' club, you mean?"

"The thought of a refusal never entered her head."

"Oh, I'd love it!" she answered happily.

"Good girl!" he said. He walked about his car, eyeing it from all sides, opened the engine hood and made a few nervous investigations, got back in his place, and they were off. Her companion, who was wearing dark goggles, turned to Ellen and dropped another pair of glasses in her lap with the complimentary words: "Better put them on!"

Ellen obediently snapped them against her soft hair. Not another word was spoken for those miles. Ellen was entirely conscious that the man beside her was gradually working out of his irritation and anger.

After awhile he glanced at her, smiled a sudden and perplexing smile, and said:

"I'm pleasant company for you, what? Have you minded my chatter?"

Ellen laughed in some embarrassment. "I didn't mind not talking," she said, shyly.

"You want?" he asked in so loud a voice that she felt rather frightened. "You didn't mind? Well, that's so much gained, anyway."

He drove on for a minute or two, and then asked abruptly: "Miss Latimer, how much of that did you get?"

Ellen was not quite sure she understood him.

"You mean that at the house?" she faltered, as he gave her a shrewd side glance.

"Exactly."

"I knew that Mr. — that your father was there?" the girl said, timidly.

Gibbs wrinkled at the wheel with large, strong lips, his brow clearing as they flew along in silence.

"On a such woman," she heard him say under his breath. Ellen felt her color rise, she looked straight ahead, wondering if she arranged that.

Ellen's quick look met his; she shook her head decidedly.

"Mrs. Rose? Oh, no! She wouldn't do a thing like that! She was frightfully nervous the instant she saw you."

She answered confidently. "She's too good-hearted—she wouldn't do a thing like that!"

Again he did not answer, except for

Distilled Wisdom in Aged Irish Proverbs

"The proverb of a nation are the distilled wit of generations of its people, and the true wit of the race is oftentimes in proportion to the truth and beauty of its proverbs," says Seumas MacManus, who points out, according to the Montreal Herald, that the sayings of the Irish are singularly rich in poetry, philosophy, satire and wisdom.

"The silent mouth is melodious," is an Irish proverb of poetic beauty.

"Our eyes should be blind in the shade of another," and "If the best man's thoughts were written on his forehead, he would wear his hat down over his eyes," inculcate charity in judging others.

"God never shuts one door but He opens two," and "Hope is the physician of every misery," express the optimism of the race.

"Reticence is often added under a dubious glance and a half-satisfied nod. But after a while he spoke. "I guess you're right. You probably are. I guess I'm just out of sorts—making too much of the whole thing!"

The car slowed down, Gibbs looked at the fastening of one of his big gloves, shot Ellen a glance.

"Have you got a mother?"

"No," Ellen answered. "My mother is dead."

"So is mine," he said soberly. "I loved her very much. I don't—I don't get used to it."

"I'm sorry!" the girl said, simply, after a moment.

For a few minutes he was silent. Then he suddenly began to speak of his mother.

"I don't know why," he said, mysteriously. "But I wish you had known my mother. She was a most extraordinary person. She was full of life, I think, and when I was a boy about eighteen or nineteen, she had an illness, and she never left her couch after that—for twelve years. I was studying in Paris, she and my father had left me there; she wanted me to be a painter. But on my own re-presently. Let her have her money and position and good times, I don't grudge them, God knows. But I feel as if it wasn't only my mother who died a year ago, but my father, too, and the old days, and the old ways of thinking. Some day—I don't know—I'll go in and see the old man, and we'll have a talk."

"But you've not met her?" Ellen asked, thoughtfully, when his voice had dropped to silence. "She doesn't seem to me the cloak-model type."

"Pretty, eh?" he asked, with dry interest.

"Oh, extremely! She's more lovely than pretty, she really has a lovely face, and I think she is clever, too. She's studying French and music, and she—well, she has a way of looking silent that makes other women seem like chatter-boxes!"

"It must be lots of fun to play her game," Gibbs said, musingly. "Watching every chance, studying the Social Register as if it were her catechism, picking up bridge and French and music—I wonder if my father sees through it?"

"It wouldn't be worth while to me, not if I was left a million dollars," Ellen contributed. "There's too much that's uncomfortable about it. And if I had daughters, I wouldn't want them to think that only money counted. I don't mean that I could do it, even if I did want to!" she said hastily.

"There's nothing in it for the people who chase it all their lives," Gibbs observed. "And the real people—the ones who are born to it, don't know they have it—so there you are! You can't buy anything real with money, as I see you suspect. Well, now I've talked you to death about me, and told you my maiden name and everything, and it's your turn. You didn't drop out of the sky, I suppose, just to give me an excuse to blow off steam? You live in—?"

"Fort Washington, Long Island. Age, twenty-two," Ellen said demurely. She told him about her grandfather, and Joe, and her work at the Art League. It pleased her to be able to paint Mrs. Rose in the colors of a generous benevolence, to show him what a difference the friendship of the kindly old member had made in her life. She said that she lived in an old-fashioned village house, and that Aunt Elsie was considered the best housekeeper in the village, and that her tomatoes and Ellen's dahlias had twice taken prizes at the Minerva fair.

"You sound quaint," said Gibbs, "and as if you might have a melodeon in the parlor."

"We have!" Ellen said, disarming and widening her eyes as she smiled at him.

"After that they ran on for a while in unimportant silence until he strapped the car at one side of the road, and took off his glasses. Ellen took her own off, too, and looked at him in some surprise, as they blinked at each other in the strong light.

"We are now forty miles from Columbus Circle, and it is one o'clock," said Gibbs. "How do you feel about luncheon? A place called 'Adrian's' is about three miles from here, and I'm a frail young thing, and I've not had any breakfast."

"The conventional aspect of the affair struck Ellen for the first time. She looked at him gravely, and her ready color crept up. She did not know him, her chaperon was even unaware that she was in his care. Moved to get foolish girls into strange places, Aunt Elsie said, and a girl never made a mistake in refusing when she was in doubt.

"Gibbs was smiling at her obvious hesitation.

"You know you're safe with me, know you?" he asked. "You know I wouldn't take you anywhere that I wouldn't take my mother?"

That settled it. Ellen had not been born yesterday, after all. She had her own sense, Gibbs' standard of judgment, and she knew she was safe. The luncheon was a perfectly natural part of the trip; they were both hungry. And he had not had any breakfast!

She made him an answer that pleased him deeply, although he apparently conceded it nothing but a satisfied nod, and immediately hid his eyes under the glasses again.

"If you say it's all right, I know it must be."

So they went to "Adrian's," a big, shabby hotel, set upon a rise of ground, and provided with wide verandas for the summer crowd; verandas deserted now under their bare awning frames.

The meal came, hot and odorless and appetizing, and they talked while they ate. Gibbs told her of his first acquaintance with Mrs. Rose.

"I was a small kid of ten or twelve, in Rome, do you see? And she was there with her first husband, Torrey. My mother was kind to her. We were at the same hotel, and she was awfully kind to me. She had a brother with her, about my age, and we saw a good deal of each other. Later, when she was a widow, she turned up in Paris with the two children. My mother and father were staying there for a while, before leaving me there to study. And later, she came here, and married Rose, who is a darn nice fellow, and now of course she regards me as a member of her family."

"She went to school in Boston with my mother," Ellen said. "But I never saw her until a few years ago. Now that I've visited her I can see just the careless way she suddenly thought of inviting me to her Thanksgiving house party. I never had such a wretched, uncomfortable time in my life; perhaps it was my own fault!"

Well, apparently the Prince Charming has arrived? A case of love at first sight?

Bell-Bird of Africa

The loudest voiced bird is undoubtedly the bell-bird or companion of South America and Africa. This feathered songster gives forth a loud, clear note almost exactly like the tolling of a bell. The companion, which is a white bird, about the size of a pigeon, has on its head a horny growth, and this, connected with the roof of the bird's mouth, is the cause of the peculiar tone.

Real Stories About Real Girls

By MRS. HARLAND M. ALLEN

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

QUEEN BEES BRING ROYAL RETURNS

"T PAYS to specialize" when you are engaged in the art of apiculture. Bee keeping, always a specialized business, reaches its most highly specialized and most lucrative form in the raising of queen bees.

But the work of raising queen bees is difficult, and there are many failures, admits a girl specialist in the industry.

"The girl who decides to undertake the raising of queen bees had best consider it, for a time, at least, as a side-line to the business of general bee keeping," says this queen of the queen bees. "She can realize profits off her honey, in that way, while she is learning to manage her queens."

The market of the specialist in queen-bee raising is formed by the general beekeepers of the country. The most readily sold queens are bred from the hotable sweet-tempered golden-colored Italian stock.

The first step of the commercial queen bee raiser is to remove the established queen from one of the colonies. Next, she should remove some young eggs from another colony and place them, by means of a tiny metal spoon, into wax cups, or "queen cells," similar to the ones queen larvae naturally have, set the cups in a frame, and place the frame in the midst of the first colony. She can make these cups herself, or she can procure them from a good bee supply house.

The bees which have been deprived of their first queen set up a hum of joy at the discovery of the new queen egg, and immediately set to work to provide it with the special "royal jelly," which means that a queen will emerge in about sixteen days.

Since a queen bee is jealous of her rights, and will fight to the death with any other queen that may hatch, the keeper must enclose each cell in a separate compartment, so that each queen will hatch in a little cage by herself.

When a queen has hatched, the keeper must remove her to a "nursing box," five inches square and four inches deep, containing a couple of small colonies of honey-bees. The keeper pours in with her about a cupful of bees, and with them the queen bee sets up a temporary home. After preliminary short excursions which assure her that she can find her way home, the queen makes her "wedding flight," from which she returns married for life. Soon she begins to lay—and then the keeper knows that she is successfully mated, that she will produce half a million eggs in the three or four years of her life, and that she is, therefore, ready for shipment.

THE "FLOWER GIRL"

A "FLOWER GIRL" is not always an adjunct to a wedding ceremony. Often she is just some energetic girl who has turned her fancy for flowers into financial success. Fads and fashions are not always trying returns, but a fair for flowers, if rightly directed, does.

A "flower girl" I ran across the other day became provoked when I used the word "art" in connection with her work, because she said it was all a matter of business. Later on, she admitted that she did indulge her artistic tendencies, a bit as she worked in her garden, though she sternly repressed them when she marketed her wares.

True garden-craft is market-craft. The stampling block of most country and small-town girls in selling flowers is their proneness to set limitations for themselves. A girl is sometimes satisfied to carry a little basket of flowers into the city each day, when she could be shipping out hundreds of dollars' worth of flowers daily during the season.

One step such a girl may profitably make is the making of an arrangement with the hotel proprietor to provide his tables with flowers at a fixed sum per month. The proprietor may agree to display her freshest flowers every morning where people will see and buy them, too.

Furnishing flowers for the town cemetery may be another opportunity for her. She may put up flowers for funerals, too. She should solicit this trade herself, pointing out that flowers received from the city are not always fresh and attractive, as hers would be.

A "birthday book," in which is listed birthday and other anniversaries of as many women as possible, is a help. The flower girl who keeps a book may call the woman's husband to remind him of the event, and to suggest that he "say it with flowers."

Of course, there is something else to the flower business than simply going to the right places to sell them. One must have a suitable product, and that requires in this case, an artistic instinct. Even in business, one can't "sit it with flowers" unless she understands their language, which is, after all, an artistic one.

Now, caring for a flower garden is essentially a work for which many women are eminently suited.

You must be both an artist and a business woman, then, if you are ambitious to succeed as a "flower girl."

Girls Fly Fortune Kites

On the flat housetops of Morocco girls may often be seen flying kites, which they believe will give an augury of their future.

If the kite remains unbroken good fortune in a happy marriage and handsome husband is in store for them; if mishap befall the kite evil days will be their portion, says the Detroit News. So much faith do the girls put in this test that if the kite is broken they are depressed for many days to come and consider it a very bad omen.

MAN TOLD MRS. SPENCER "TANLAC SAVED MY LIFE"

And Then She Tried Treatment and Found Relief from Her Own Troubles.

"I am 68 years of age, but since taking Tanlac I have gained 9 lbs. and don't feel over 40," are the splendid results Mrs. Sarah Spencer, 2108 22nd Ave., S., Minneapolis, Minn., declares she has obtained from the celebrated treatment.

"For two years stomach trouble, constipation and biliousness kept me awfully run down. I was almost a nervous wreck, got very little ease or rest and was right on the verge of giving up.

"One day I asked a man, whose picture and testimonial I saw in the paper, if Tanlac really helped him. He said, 'Tanlac saved my life; so I lost no time buying Tanlac, and the results are, I have gained 9 lbs. and enjoy splendid health. I now know for myself that Tanlac is wonderful.' Tanlac is for sale by all good drug stores. Accept no substitutes. Over 40 million bottles sold.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

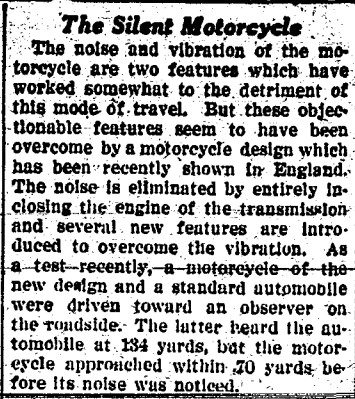

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A Blessing to Suffering Women," Writes One

Louisville, Illinois.—"I certainly thank you for the great benefit I have received from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I first learned about it from my step-mother who got so much help from it. Several years ago I took it for inward weakness and since then I have taken it during the Change of Life and it has been a great help to me. I am certainly in a blessing to suffering women and I take pleasure in recommending it. My health has been better this summer than it has been for five years. I am now able to do all my work and have gained 340 pounds of fruit and vegetables this summer."—Mrs. KATE McPEAK, Louisville, Illinois.

Wants Letter Used As Proof

Frankford, Pennsylvania.—"I am sure if women who suffer through the Change of Life as I have, with hot flashes, nervousness and other weaknesses, would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would be benefited as I was. My nerves were so bad that every little noise made me jump, but now I am not bothered that way at all. My husband says he really hated to look at me I looked so miserable. I hope you will use this letter as proof of the help the Vegetable Compound is giving me."—Mrs. ARBIE HARVEY, 5711 Leonard St., Frankford, Pa.

The Silent Motorcycle

The noise and vibration of the motorcycle are two features which have worked somewhat to the detriment of this mode of travel. But these objectionable features seem to have been overcome by a motorcycle design which has been recently shown in England. The noise is eliminated by entirely enclosing the engine of the transmission and several new features are introduced to overcome the vibration. As a test—recently, a motorcycle of the new design and a standard automobile were driven toward an observer on the roadside. The latter heard the automobile at 134 yards, but the motorcycle approached within 30 yards before its noise was noticed.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best—Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend it for almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it is a medicine that fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mailing post address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

Modern Life

As two pedestrians were starting to cross a busy thoroughfare a man almost grazed them with his high-powered car and forced them back to the curb. "What a nuisance," commented one of the pedestrians.

"The same," replied the other. "I heard he was out of work."

"He is?"

"Then how can he maintain an expensive automobile?"

"That, my boy, is a secret which baffles master minds. Many of us apparently no longer need fully equipped automobiles."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Arsenal Unearthed

Twenty-two muskets and rotting muzzle-loading muskets and several copper subvers were unearthed in a sandstone cave on a small island ten miles from the mainland by Emerson Wray, a blue fox farmer. The weapons are believed to have been hidden by a landing party of Russians who acted as hijackers against sealers in the early days of Alaska's Asiatic history.

The Parcel Post

"Hey Hiram!"

"What is it?" inquired the grizzled agriculturist as he lounged over the fence.

"The postmaster up to the village says please call and get your mail."

"I'll drop around some time enduring the week."

"He wants you to drop around to once. There's a wagging tongue in your letter box and it sticks out so far he can't close the front door."—Cap-per's Weekly.

In England they are building air express ships—entirely constructed of steel, including propellers. They will have a sailing radius of 1,000 miles and a speed of 100 miles an hour. Each ship will be fitted out with an electric kitchen.

Forced To Remain in Bed

Carleisle, Illinois.—"During the Change of Life I suffered with severe nervousness and with disturbances of the entire system. These continued probably two years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I could do none of my work and was not always able to be up. For ten days at a time I was forced to remain in bed with my hips propped higher than my head and the pains were terrible. The doctor helped some but each time I was forced to go over the same suffering. I had taken the Vegetable Compound in 1910 after my twins were born and it had helped me so I decided to try it again. I became better and gained in strength. I have taken it for nearly three years now but not steadily. I am able to do my housework but I avoid all heavy lifting and washing and ironing as I know I am not strong enough yet. I give the Vegetable Compound to my daughters and recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. B. BRAND, 460 Fairfax Street, Carlyle, Illinois.

NOVEL THREE-WHEELED MACHINE OF 1900

This is the latest addition to the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, the Knox three-wheeler of 1900. It is one of the earliest commercial motor vehicles and is of a style known as a "trap." The engine is a one-cylinder, air-cooled. The power application is controlled by the lever at the driver's left. In 1909 this machine was driven in a parade at the Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York city and was awarded $25 for the oldest machine to complete the line of march under its own power. Paul E. Garber of the Smithsonian staff is shown in the machine.

NEGLECT CAUSES MANY ACCIDENTS

Car Is Equipped With Set of Brakes and Ill Treatment Destroys Them.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

"If only you ignorant mortals could understand motor talk," grunted a tiny voice, "what harrowing tales of torture you would hear."

"But some of us do," I gasped, peering down to locate the hidden voice which seemed to come from inside the brake band of the car by which I was standing. "I've studied it conscientiously for ten years."

"Then for the love of deprecation, listen—and carry my message to the world. I'm all worn out and ready to fall apart."

Brake Worn Out.

I can't repeat that pitiful tale. It's moral is listed in the newspapers every day under the head of "Accidents." It was only too true that the poor brake was worn out just as he said, for the next day I came across it and the rest of the car, piled against a tree at the foot of a hill. The driver escaped with a usual with a foul. He intends to buy another car with good brakes this time. He told me so himself. Do you know him? His name is Legion.

Now, what does this mean about the brakes on your car? Is their action so positive that they will stop the car almost instantly? Will they hold in an emergency? You say: "Yes, of course, they did it just the other day." But would you be willing to bet that they would do it again?

Are you one of those who trust in luck and the devil to take care of you, and eventually, "bust" into a telegraph pole? If you are one of those kind of drivers, you better put this copy of my article carefully away to read again later. You will appreciate the story much more then—provided St. Peter hasn't given you a harp in the meanwhile.

Ill Treatment Destroys.

Every car is equipped with a good set of brakes and neglect and ill treatment are the only things that destroy them. That word "neglect" should be erased from every motorist's dictionary for it is the cause of 100 per cent of all motor accidents.

Brakes must be given the most critical attention and that, frequently. Test them! Watch out that the brakes are not wearing too fast. Make this inspection two or three times a week. You, the driver, is the one who pays the penalty if anything goes wrong on the road.

Stuck in Deep Mud

When the car is stuck in deep mud and the wheels cannot get any purchase try wrapping the tire chains bodily around the tire and rim of the wheel, so that they make a big bunch and then fasten them with a strap or some wire. Turn on low gear, slowly and carefully and generally the wheels will get grip enough to pull the car out.

Do Not Employ Heat to Straighten Steel

If through some mishap, some of the steel parts of the chassis, such as the rear axle tubes or front axle, become bent, do not use heat to straighten them, because these parts are all carefully heat treated, and if heated for straightening they are likely to have the effects of their accurate heat treatment nullified. This will result in materially weakening the parts so that they are apt to be incapable of withstanding the strains put upon them.

The best way is to straighten such parts cold, but if the bends are too great this cannot be done. In extreme cases of this kind the best thing to do is to ship the affected part or parts to the factory for straightening.

Automobile Hints

The railroad crossing is no place to put on a non-stop run.

In these days, autoists who drive like 80 are getting 40.

Automobile drivers once argued over miles per gallon but now it is miles per hour.

California is considering a 5-cent gasoline tax.

A pedestrian escaped death at a crossing. It also represents a saving in gasoline.

Don't run on a flat tire. Better run on the rim, if only for a short distance.

Five persons a day, on the average, have been killed at grade crossings for the last five years.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SPOT'S VISIT

Spot was a little white dog with shaggy white hair and a little pink nose.

He was a cousin of Snowball, another dog who belonged to a cousin of Spot's mistress.

Snowball was white and shaggy and little and a great pet.

Whenever Spot's mistress went to visit her cousin, Spot went along, too. It was quite a little journey by train, but he was never left at home. He had a special basket in which he traveled, and his mistress carried the basket.

When he arrived he always had a beautiful time. He played with Snowball, he played with the different members of the family, he sat up on his hind legs and "begged" prettily for good things to eat.

He looked now at the new rabbits which had arrived since they had last seen him.

There were six of them, and they were very white and soft and fluffy, and their little noses were pink.

The last time he had been here there had been six or seven running little turtles. They had been amusing.

Test for Gasoline Should Be Tried Out

Know how to test the gasoline you purchase?

The next time you drive up to a filling station, take out a piece of white paper, and get the man to put a few drops of his product on it.

Wait two or three minutes for the gas to evaporate.

If, then, you cannot see where the "gas" was put, fill up.

If you can see a grease spot, drive on.

This comes from a man who makes gasoline and has known it all his life.

Prevent Car Operation by Unauthorized Person

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing an automobile lock, the invention of E. C. Lampson of Jefferson, Ohio, says:

The invention relates to a simple means for preventing the operation of an automobile by an unauthorized person through the combination of parts with locking means in such a manner as to render inoperative the clutch pedal shaft or sleeve.

It is such that either clutch or service brakes may be locked independently or at the same time, and thus prevent the car from being pushed or dragged away.

The device may be used in many forms, and positioned in any convenient place on the car. It is applicable to practically any type of car manufactured.

Resetting a Magneto

In resetting the magneto the coupling often may be placed so as to cause the magneto shaft to get out of alignment. The best method is to note the condition of the coupling before being reset, which is done by slipping the thumb and forefinger around it.

The periphery should be perfectly smooth and one side should not be higher than the other. In resetting the coupling clean it well and see that the outer surfaces of the parts are in line.

Loosening Hub Caps

Hub caps won't always come off merely by wrench persuasion, even when considerable manual effort is also used. If the cap is so tight that you cannot budge it by your own efforts, bring the jack into the matter. Use a fairly long-handled wrench and place the jack under the end of the handle. A few strokes of the jack will get the best of the stubbornst hub cap.

Care of Magneto

While the magneto does not require much attention other than an occasional oiling, in accordance with the instructions of the maker, it is a good plan to remove the breaker box and distributor covers to clean these members. A small, soft brush will be of service. This should be done at intervals, especially if the magneto is exposed to dust, etc.

Drive Wheels Locked

It sometimes happens that the drive wheels of the car are locked because of breakage in the differential or universal, so that it is impossible ever to haul the car home. In these circumstances it is best to remove the keys that hold the rear wheels to the axles. This allows the rear axles to turn freely and the car may be towed in without further difficulty.

Permanent roads are a good investment—not an expense

How the Motor Industry Set the Pace for Highway Building

The "horseless carriage" of yesterday is now being produced as the modern automobile at the rate of 4,000,000 a year. The total number of motor vehicles registered in the United States is over 16,000,000.

And automobiles built today are more than ever capable of economically serving both business and recreation needs.

But there is an obstacle standing in the way of their maximum service to owners.

For while the automobile industry made paved highways an economic necessity, the mileage of such roads is today years behind the requirements of modern traffic.

Happily motorists everywhere are boosting for more and wider paved highways.

And extensive experience has taught them that Concrete Highways are one of the best all-around investments they can make—an investment that pays big dividends.

As one of our 16,000,000 motorists you know better than anyone else the need for more and wider Concrete Roads. Start now to help your local officials provide them.

The Powers Concert trio will give one of their musical concerts at the school auditorium Friday night, Oct. 17. This is to be a benefit for the High School Glee Club. No one who loves music should miss this event. It is sure to please. The young people have a double interest in the youth of the young member of the group, Master Harold, nine years old, who plays the violin with remarkable technique, and he handles the more difficult of compositions with marvelous mastery. Admissions are 25 and 35 cents.

Work is progressing slowly on the new bridge and the bridge work is practically finished except the tower which is being along with. Mr. Lindholm of the Lansing Construction Company says that all material for the work is now on the ground. The road is nearly all completed and everything has been started and everything will soon be under way. Mr. Lindholm says that because of the slow delivery of the stone for the tower and window ledge they will not be able to finish the job by December 1st but however promises that the building will be ready for the Christmas season.

Palp From Ailanthus

Officials of the United States forest products laboratory in Madison, Wis., announce the discovery of what is declared to be an excellent and valuable pulp wood from the ailanthus tree, otherwise known as the "Tree of Heaven." Officials, after laboratory tests, say that it developed into a high grade of book paper, also fit for use in the manufacture of lithograph and writing paper. The ailanthus was imported from China into Pennsylvania and New York, where it rapidly is becoming a weed and a menace.

NASH
Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value

A National Tribute to Nash

7,800 Cars Oversold
Despite Record-breaking Output

Though Nash production is at the highest level ever attained

—still the demand from every section of the country for these new Advanced Six and Special Six models has swept sales to a point so far beyond the best previous mark that unfilled orders total 7,800 cars.

Nothing that we might say could add the weight of a straw to this irrefutable evidence that men and women everywhere do see clearly in these new cars unparalleled excellence and value.

Happily, with increased output unreasonable delay is eliminated for those who act with promptitude in placing orders.

And deliveries will be made on the rotation basis which is fair to all.

In the meantime—October 5th to 12th is national Nash Oversold Week in honor of the extraordinary success of these new models and we are staging a special exhibition.

SPANISH VOGUE IN SHAWLS; WEARABLE TYPES IN COATS

FASHION this season, is conspicuously a matter of following the Spanish vogue. At every style exhibit, at social gatherings galore, where modish women add to the picture, in cable reports from across seas, in messages brought by word of mouth by those incoming voyagers who have not left a stone unturned in Paris, London, Vienna and other style centers in their search for "the latest," the present-day modes are discussed and exploited in terms of picturesque Spain. One of the outstanding notes in this overwhelming favor for modes Spanish is the vogue for the deep-fringed, can no longer keep up with her. In stead, he contributes his fleece toward making her a coat all trimmed with braid and fur, and everywhere that Mary goes the coat's along with her. This is an arrangement highly satisfactory to Mary in general, who are just now looking for coats that will do for all-round wear, give good service and be equal to holding their own with different kinds of hats. For Mary has learned to leave it to the hat, more than anything else, when it comes to adapting costume to occasion. Here is one of those accommodating new coats, of a soft and becoming pile graceful, gay-hued shawl. Creators of style who express their genius through knitted stitch, having "caught the vision," are scoring new triumphs in that they are introducing the shawl. These wonders of the knitted art are appearing—the feminine heart with its beautiful long-fringed shawl creations which reflect most fascinatingly true Spanish colorings of crimson, black, orange, green and purple. Sometimes the color glory is varied, as in the case of this lovely shawl shown in the fabric, with rich, but sturdy trimmings that will fit in with almost any background. Its mild lining provides comfort and serviceability. Its luxurious main and cuffs are of Hudson seal and there is a little glint of gold in the silk braid that makes a finish ting touch. Probably its owner has a simple plaid frock to match the coat lining and a plain felt hat to complete, with the coat, an ensemble for every-day street wear. But her ostrich-trimmed millinery indicates that a

A black-silk knitted shawl, designed in triangular form, with an effective green and blue peacock pattern interknitted in the corner section, is an outcome of the Spanish shawl vogue.

Among the large knitted squares simulating the crepe Spanish shawls, green and beige are successfully introduced in a particularly handsome model, which carries a wide border knitted in fancy stitch, repeating the two colors in the deep fringe. Mary had a little lamb, but he

Knitted Blouse and Hat
Knitted clothes for sports wear still retain their popularity, and the manufacturers continue to design most attractive models. A straight knitted blouse on the lines of a short tunic has embroidery in Russian colors done in wide bands. There is a smart little hat to match.

Add Finishing Touch
Net footing finishes many of the afternoon frocks. Somehow, net seems to need crystal buttons, and one set-

Beauty does not lie in the face. It lies in the harmony between man and his industry. Beauty is expression. When I paint a mother try to render her beautiful by the mere look she gives her child. J. Francois Millet.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

To make codfish chowder take an inch slice of salt pork three and one-half inches square, cut into small dice and fry until crisp and brown. Add three sliced onions and stir in the fat until thoroughly heated; add half a dozen diced potatoes and cover with water. Cook until the vegetables are tender. In the meantime have soaking a half-pound or more of codfish, shredded; add this with a quart of milk to the rest of the ingredients and when the milk is scalding hot add one-half dozen milk crackers which have been scalded with boiling water. Serve one cracker in each dish of the chowder.

Fresh fish may be used just as the salt codfish, cooking it until tender, with the vegetables, then add the milk. Turkish Soup—Cook one-fourth of a cupful of rice in three cupfuls of brown soup stock until soft. Cook a bit of bay leaf, two slices of onion, ten peppercorns and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of celery salt with one and one-half cupfuls of strained tomatoes thirty minutes. Combine mixtures, rub through a sieve and bind with two tablespoonfuls of butter and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour cooked together. Season with salt and pepper.

Lemon Rice Pudding.—Wash and cook one-third of a cupful of rice in the following: Put into a saucepan the grated rind and juice of a lemon with one-third of a cupful each of sugar and water; when boiling add the rice. Cook until soft. Put the cooked rice with three cupfuls of milk and more sugar if liked into baking dish; add a pinch of salt and bake three hours, allowing it to brown at the last. Serve hot or cold.

Entire Wheat Bread.—Take two cupfuls of graham flour, two of entire wheat flour, two teaspoonfuls of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cupful of molasses, one and one-half cupfuls of sour milk. Mix together. Put into a greased bread pan and bake one hour in a slow oven. Nuts may be added, adding to the nutritiveness of the loaf.

We consider it knowing the resemblance of things which differ, and the difference of things that are alike. Madame de Staël.

MORE GOOD THINGS

A most tasty luncheon dish is salmon loaf. Prepare as usually, steam or bake and serve with Spanish sauce.

Strawberry Bavarian Cream.—Soften one package of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water and dissolve in one-half cupful of strawberry syrup; add one cupful of berries, pressed through a sieve, three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and the juice of half a lemon. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then chill on ice. When the mixture begins to thicken, fold in one and one-half cupfuls of whipped cream. Mold and serve cold, decorated with chopped pistachio nuts, or use small macaroons.

Sour Cream Apple Pudding.—Pure and core enough cooking apples to weigh a pound after peeling and coring. Cut into eighth pieces in a pudding dish and steam until soft in a closely covered dish. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter, and one-half cupful of sugar and mix until smooth. Add three well-beaten eggs, one cupful of sour cream, two slices of a saucy, and stir over the fire until the eggs begin slightly to thicken. Remove from the fire, add one-half cupful of pulled and sifted zucchini, season with two teaspoonfuls of vanilla and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Have ready a well-greased baking dish, line it with crumbs, turn in the pudding and bake 45 minutes. Serve with hard sauce.

Stuffed Pepper Pickle.—Take twenty small green peppers, one small head of cabbage, two medium-sized onions, one teaspoonful each of ground cinnamon, cloves and mustard, one cupful of salt, a teaspoonful of celery seeds and vinegar to cover. Wash all the vegetables carefully. Cut the tops from the peppers, leaving a bit hanging for a hinge to the cover. Soak over night in salt water after removing the seeds and white pulp. In the morning drain and fill with the stuffing. Chop the cabbage and onions and mix well with the condiments and all the peppers. Tie the tops on securely, pack in a stone jar and cover with boiling hot vinegar. Keep the jar tightly covered and in six weeks they will be ready to serve.

The city woman who has the corner grocery or the telephone to support her need not worry, but the woman in the country or cottage by the lake, miles from a lemon, must prepare for such times of siege.

Painful Beauty
Women of Tibet, like their western sisters, attain beauty through suffering. The fashionable Tibetan lady rubs her face, hands and neck with melted butter before going to bed, and next morning dusts her face with finely powdered ashes in order to whiten her complexion.

Venezuela Zone Divisions
Venezuela is naturally divided into three zones, agricultural, pastoral and forest.
